Grade Level Taught: Grade 12

Question 1:

Can you tell me about how you usually assess your students in your class? what types of assessment do you usually use?

Interviewee:

"I follow the DepEd aligned assessment approach. I assess before, during, and after lessons to make sure every student is supported and learning. Diagnostic, formative, summative, experimental, and performance task."

Question 2:

Can you explain how you conduct assessment before, during, and after a lesson? What do you usually do with the results of the assessment to help improve your students' learning?

Interviewee:

"Before the lesson. I use simple tools: KWL charts, short pre-tests, oral questions, or quick concept checks to find out what students already know about the topic. With the results: I adjust my lesson plan and skip what they already know, and spend more time on areas they find difficult.

During the lesson. I do Think-Pair-Share, quick oral recitation, short quizzes, True/False, and guided questions. I give immediate feedback and praise what they did well, gently correcting misunderstandings right away. With the results, I provide extra examples or simplified explanations for struggling students

After the lesson, I measure mastery through unit tests, essays, performance tasks, projects, portfolios, or presentations scored with clear rubrics. Align all tasks strictly with DepEd learning competencies. With the results, I record grades and give clear, timely feedback on strengths and areas to improve. I also identify students who need remediation and provide extra practice, coaching, or simplified activities. And lastly, I share the results with parents and students in conferences—discussing progress and planning how home and school can work together."
